Nicole's Story of Why She Returned to Metco After Moving Her Accounts to a Bank

I grew up with Metco as my [credit union] and have nothing but great memories of the kind, friendly staff. I loved walking in and they knew my name, not only mine but my WHOLE family. It's not something you see everyday. I know this because I did switch banks, no real reason for leaving, but I went to a bank that was close to my work. It was not the Metco experience.

As time went on, getting face to face interactions in my bank were few and far between, I can't recall them ever knowing my name or my daughter's, let alone anything about us. When I took my daughter to this bank for help her get her first car loan, they denied her/us but gave no explanation or direction as to what to do. Fast forward to having my family and friends recommend me returning to Metco. I pulled up [your] website, sent a message, and boom, a few days later my daughter and I were opening up accounts and getting pre-approved for a car loan!

My daughter has heard from my family about [Metco] for YEARS but as we left that day she said nothing prepared her for how she felt like we were sitting with a long time friend as we opened our accounts. She said Kassi knew so much about our family and friends, that she knew this was going to be a great [place to] bank, and I could not agree more!

Thank you for returning my call the next day, and for making us feel like family!! We are so glad to be back!

Nicole shares above why it's so important to bank with a credit union that knows you, truly cares about your financial needs, and is willing to work with members who have low or no credit.

Are Credit Cards Considered Debt?

People often overlook credit card balances as a form of debt - they simply don't think of a credit card as a loan. In our latest blog article, Regan Carlo, VP of Operations, talks about some things she was surprised to hear during recent financial counseling appointments.
